BULGARIANS FIGHT WAY TO CONSTANTINOPLE GATES; REPORT ARMISTICE SIGNED

Victorious Troops at Kilios, a Few Miles From Capital, While Peace Is Furthered.

CHOLERA AT CHATALJA.

Six Thousand Turkish Troops Stricken, While Bulgars Are Also Believed Victims.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Bulgaria and Turkey have agreed upon an armistice, according to a special news agency despatch which reached this city this afternoon from Bucharest, Roumania.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 15.—Bulgarian troops have reached the vicinity of Kilios on the Black Sea coast at the entrance of the Bosphorus, and within a few miles of the capital. The men belonging to the Turkish lifeboat station have left.

The announcement that the Bulgarians have reached the vicinity of Kilios lifts a corner of the veil which has been baffling observers for some days regarding the movements of the victorious invaders in front of the Ottoman capital.

Their appearance at Kilios shows that they have managed to creep round behind what is known as the Forest of Belgrade on the outskirts of Constantinople and are now in close proximity to Therapia, the summer resort of the residents of Constantinople. From Therapia a good road leads to within a few miles of Kilios.

Nothing has yet come to hand to show whether the Bulgarians at Kilios are in strong force or merely a detachment of cavalry scouts blazing a new route of approach to the Turkish capital. There is a strongly defended fort at Kilios, but this was constructed to defend the place from attack by sea, and may be open to assault on the land side.

6,000 CASES OF CHOLERA NOW AMONG TURKISH TROOPS.

The cholera epidemic among the Turkish troops holding the line of fortifications at Chatalja in front of Constantinople is rapidly becoming worse. Over 6,000 cases are reported daily and the total number already exceeds 60,000.

Whatever hopes the Turks may have had of maintaining the line of defense at Chatalja have been dissipated by this outbreak of cholera. An eyewitness declares that he saw 200 corpses buried in one big trench at Kademouk, the headquarters of the Turkish command-in-chief, on Tuesday. The bodies were dragged to the spot on hooks and dropped into the trench, which was not nearly deep enough for the purpose, the covering of earth being very shallow.

While cholera is undermining the Turkish defenses it also at the same time constitutes a most formidable opponent to the Bulgarian advance, and it is generally believed here that the outbreak has disposed of the question of even a temporary occupation of Constantinople by the Bulgarian troops. It is thought unlikely that King Ferdinand of Bulgaria will risk the lives of his soldiers in this way if he can avoid it.

It is stated on good authority that cholera has already appeared among the Bulgarian troops. This would not be at all surprising, seeing that they occupy the positions where the disease claimed its first victims.

The Bulgarian army on Sunday last occupied the town of Derkos at the Black Sea end of the Chatalja lines and thus controls the water supply of Constantinople. This, however, has not yet been interfered with.

The anxiety and sudden resignation with which the Turks face the series of overwhelming disasters deserve comment. It is true the severe application of martial law prevents the public expression of any criticism or demonstration of resentment. The great mass of Moslems, however, are inclined to howl at the inevitable and to accept without violent opposition what they regard as the dictate of fate.

MORE TURKS SURRENDER TO SERVIAN FORCES.

BIG BANK WRECKER, WHO LOSES APPEAL, ORDERED TO PRISON.

BANKER CUMMINS MUST SERVE TERM; APPEAL IS DENIED

Wrecker of Carnegie Trust Co. Ordered to Sing Sing Cell for Four Years.

William J. Cummins, once a director and would-be exploiter of the defunct Carnegie Trust Company, must serve his Sing Sing sentence of not less than four years and eight months or more than eight years and eight months, according to a decision of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court handed down today. He was convicted a year ago of having raised $10,000 on checks of the Nineteenth Ward Bank and the Van Norden Trust Company, ostensibly to protect stock of those concerns, and to have converted it to his own use.

Council for Cummins said today that the case would be taken to the Court of Appeals and that an effort would be made to obtain another stay of the prosecutor's sentence pending that appeal.

Cummins came from Nashville, Tenn., several years ago, with several ambitious industrial promotions, and managed to get control of the affairs of the Carnegie Trust Company, which he used in financing his many substantial enterprises. When the President of the company, C. C. Dickinson, died of pneumonia under circumstances suggesting suicide or foul play, Cummins put J. B. Reichman, since convicted of offenses similar to those charged against Cummins, at the head of the company.

It was charged at the trial of Cummins that he exhausted the funds and credit of the Carnegie Trust Company in the effort to bolster up the affairs of the corporations in which himself and his friends were interested.

Charles B. Hyde, then City Chamberlain, was indicted for the misuse of city funds, on charges growing out of the Carnegie Trust scandal. His trial has been set for Nov. 20.

FAMOUS SURGEONS SEE PATIENT DIE ON OPERATING TABLE

Stovaine Poisoning Proves Fatal to Many Before Cutting Begins.

CASE CONSIDERED RARE.

Use of New Anesthetic Has Seldom Resulted Adversely, Men of Medicine Say.

George Hart, a patient suffering from hemiplegia, died this afternoon on the operating table of the New York Polytechnic Hospital, before a group of distinguished surgeons, members of the Clinical Congress of Surgeons of North America, at present in session in this city.

This was the first fatal termination of the series of remarkable demonstrations of advanced surgery, which has been in progress in various hospitals and clinics throughout the city, during the visit of the surgeons. What made the death of the patient far more significant, in the eyes of the surgeons, was that it was the first fatal case in this country of stovaine poisoning.

The patient was laid on the operating table and the visiting surgeons, who had tickets to admit them to the room, clustered about. Dr. William Scamman Bainbridge, the operating surgeon, and his assistants and nurses, prepared themselves with the usual antiseptic and donned their robes and masks. Then, briefly, Dr. Bainbridge explained the uses of the newly discovered stovaine as a local anesthetic to supplant ether and the other anesthetics commonly utilized.

Dr. Bainbridge then injected stovaine hypodermically in the patient's spinal cord. The usual time was allowed for the drug's taking effect before an incision was commenced, but instead of showing the usual reaction to the anesthetic, the patient suddenly began to sink. His heart action became quickly slackened and characteristic evidences of stovaine poisoning—a very rare occurrence—were manifested.

The visiting surgeons assisted Dr. Bainbridge in his efforts to stop the incision of the poison and restore the fast ebbing vitality, but every restorative was unavailing. The patient died on the table before the eyes of the surgeons.

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 15.—Twelve persons, four of them visitors, including two girls, are buried in the vast workings of the Old Horn Silver mine at Frisco, Beaver County, Utah. The visitors are unharmed on the 300-foot level. The fate of eight miners in the lower levels is uncertain.

News reached here this morning that the Horn Silver workings had caved in from the 200 to the 300 levels at 10 o'clock last night. Daisy, aged sixteen, and Hazel, nineteen, daughters of mine Foreman Roy Alexander, with David Banks and Arnold Robinson, sightseers, and their guide, James Piley, night shift boss, communicated through air pipes that they were on the 300 level and uninjured.

Eight miners, including Foreman Alexander, were at work on lower levels. The air connections with their stations were torn out by the fall of dirt and there is reason to fear that not one will be found alive.

Rescue work was started at once by a corps of sixty miners working in relays of fifteen for fifteen minutes each. The rescue work last night was under the direction of J. R. Galt, a mining engineer, and today Supt. A. A. Henderson is in charge.

The mine is dry above the 1100 level, and unless there is a further slide of ground it is likely that the party on the upper level will be saved. They have a small supply of water and the lunches of some miners.

Frisco is about 50 miles south of Salt Lake City. The Horn Silver mine was once one of the richest silver mines in the West.

TO ONE 'BIG NIGHT': $186; BUT WIDOW'S GUESTS WON'T PAY!

Messrs. Strauss and Vosburgh Want to Know Just What Happened, Costing So Much.

THEY CAN'T REMEMBER.

Mrs. Thompson Sues on Checks, After Depleting Stocking Roll to Pay Bills.

Aaron H. Strauss, President of the New Jersey Central Development Company, at No. 10 Broadway, and Myndert A. Vosburgh, attorney for the same corporation, appeared by counsel Harry C. Koehne in the Third District Municipal Court in West Fifty-fourth street today and asked for a bill of particulars in the suit for $186 brought against them jointly by Mrs. Nancy Thompson, a grave widow, of No. 24 West Fifty-first street. The case was adjourned by agreement to Nov. 27 and John C. Oldmixon, attorney for Mrs. Thompson, promised to be on hand at that time with a full and complete bill of particulars.

Mrs. Thompson is suing to recover the face value of two checks, one for $90 and one for $96, signed by Strauss and given to her, she says, on Oct. 25. When she went to cash the checks the next day, she declares, she found payment had been stopped.

The $96 check was given her, she says, to make good $96 cash she had expended for a late supper at the Cafe des Beaux Arts. The check for $90, she states, was given in payment for an entertainment consisting, according to the complaint, of "music, recitals, songs, dances, food, drinks and cigarettes," given at her apartment on Oct. 25, in which she and several other young women participated. Mr. Strauss and Mr. Vosburgh admit the $96 transaction in a general way, but say they are extremely hard as to the entertainment in Mrs. Thompson's flat, hence their demand for the bill of particulars.

IT WAS A BIG NIGHT THAT NIGHT, ALL ADMIT.

Here is the story of the night of Oct. 25, as told by Mrs. Thompson and indorsed—except as to certain details asked for in the bill of particulars—by Mr. Strauss and Mr. Vosburgh. In passing it is proper to state that Mr. Strauss and Mr. Vosburgh appear to be about forty-five years of age and Mr. Strauss, who is quite stout, lives at No. 425 Carroll street, Brooklyn, and has an account at the Montauk Bank, in that borough.

Mr. Strauss and Mrs. Vosburgh called in the early evening on Mrs. Thompson, whom they had met several times, and announced that they wanted to be the guests at a party they yearned for music, dancing and song. Mrs. Thompson sent out and got some young women friends to aid her in providing the entertainment demanded. Along about midnight, performers and audience, being surfeited with music, recitals and dances, all these having been of the same composition and execution, concluded to bring the party to a close.

Mrs. Thompson put in a bill for $120, covering not only the musical, intellectual and terpsichorean part of the entertainment, but refreshments, liquid and otherwise, served during the program.

Mr. Strauss, Mrs. Thompson swears, gave her a check for the amount demanded. Mr. Strauss says somebody took a blank check from his pocket and filled it out for $186 and that this check was subsequently presented to his bank by Mrs. Thompson.

MRS. THOMPSON HAD A ROLL IN HER STOCKING.

From the flat in Fifty-first street, Mrs. Thompson and a young woman friend, and Strauss and Vosburgh proceeded to the Beaux Arts, where they staid without undue restraint. Mrs. Thompson says—and in this she is not disputed—that when the check was presented the combined assets of Mr. Strauss and Mr. Vosburgh did not nearly total the amount demanded.

Mrs. Thompson, who subsists, she says, exclusively upon the alimony she gets from her husband, a prominent Philadelphia, had received an alimony payment a day or two before and had quite a roll of bills in her stocking. She paid the check of $96 and also handed the waiter a tip of $2.

"BRIDGE" WEBBER RAN AFTER THE SHOOTING, SAYS JOHN THE BARBER

"Dago Frank" Takes Witness Stand and Backs Up Part of the Story Told by His Companions and His Own Alibi.

NEW WITNESSES SWEAR GUNMEN DIDN'T SHOOT

John J. Hickey Describes One of the Slayings as a Man With "Sharp Chin and a Straight Nose."

John Heisler, also known as "John the Barber," gave a strong link this afternoon in the defense of the four gunmen who are on trial before Justice Goff in Extraordinary Term of the Supreme Court charged with the murder of Herman Rosenthal. He swore that he had seen "Bridge" Webber running away from the scene of the killing after the gambler was shot, but on cross-examination he was shown an hour's shooting.

FIGHT FIRE IN HOLD OF LINER AT SEA FOR THREE HOURS

Smoke Still Pouring from the Mexico When 70 Passengers Are Landed Here.

Smoke was still coming from the hold of the Ward Line steamer Mexico when she reached her dock at Pier 17, Brooklyn, to-day, following a three-hour fight with fire yesterday morning. The seventy passengers on her decks hurried ashore, nervous and glad to escape.

Since a sailor off watch saw smoke shoot from one of the forward hatches yesterday morning at 3 o'clock until the Mexico touched her dock, no one was quite sure how serious the danger was. As soon as the fire was discovered, Capt. O'Keefe had all the passengers aroused. The men came running half clad into the saloon and the women in night clothes huddled against the walls, while the officers got ready the lifeboats. Then the hatch was opened and steam let in to smother the fire.

The wireless had begun to sputter in the dark and ten minutes elapsed before an answering call came from the City of Atlanta of the Savannah Line, which lay forty miles south. The rescue steamer lay to, awaiting the outcome of the fire, and for three hours neither vessel moved. By that time Capt. O'Keefe wireless that the fire was under control.

All day yesterday eight streams of water were flowing into the hold of the Mexico while she raced for her dock. The Mexico carried a cargo of home-milled wheat, 1,000 tons, and a large quantity of other goods.

The damage by the fire was entirely to the cargo.

FISHERIES TREATY SIGNED BY KNOX AND BRYCE.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Secretary Knox and Ambassador Bryce to-day exchanged ratifications of the treaty signed July 7 last providing for an adjustment between Great Britain and the United States of the North Atlantic fisheries controversy. The convention already has been approved by the Senate.

In substance it prescribes the boundary waters and provides a commission to pass upon the reasonableness of local Canadian and Newfoundland fisheries regulations.

"DAGO FRANK" TESTIFIES AS TO HIS OWN ALIBI.

The alibi gunman, "Dago Frank," had been on the stand almost two hours before he was succeeded by Hickey. He added little to the record of the defense save the details of his alibi, in which he recounted that he had left his companion at the door of "Bridge" Webber's poker room, telling them that he was afraid they were going to stay out all night boozing, wherefore he had better go home to "Jean Gordon." In her seventh avenue flat, as he had not been "home" in two days, he reached there only to learn that the young woman had been arrested for "loitering."

There was loss of the smooth organ.
